

Army Trail learns about the states at field days

At Army Trail School, the field days activities were all tied into the United States and things that the students had learned about or associated with individual states. The Tug of War game represented West Virginia and the Hatfield-McCoy feud. The potato sack race represented Idaho and its potatoes. A pass-the-rubber chicken relay represented Kentucky. Other games enjoyed by the students included a Florida sponge game (very welcome on a 90-degree day) and an Illinois Lincoln penny toss (ok, they were actually Frisbees with a picture of a giant penny attached).

Tug of War represents the Hatfields & McCoys.

The potato sack race was a salute to Idaho.

Kentucky was represented by a pass-the-rubber chicken relay.
